

Dear all

Aalborg University is currently seeking to expand its research team with a Professor in the field of urban planning, with a special focus on urbanisation processes and the development of smart, sustainable, and liveable cities.

A successful applicant should have strong research experience aligned to at least two of the following fields:

- Urbanisation within a global sustainable development perspective
- Intersections between land-use, housing, and transport planning
- Urban agendas and urban policies, e.g. densification and green infrastructure
- Urban infrastructure and mobility focused on public transportation, walking, and cycling

The department has traditionally played an important role in urban planning research nationally and internationally. With the described profile, the department wishes to strengthen and consolidate its position within the research field of urban planning.
