

Dear colleagues,

- Apologies for cross-posting -

We are excited to announce that our second course 'Sustainable Tourism: Re-thinking the Future' is now open for enrolment on Edx!

In this short massive open online course participants can work on authentic tourism cases to help re-think how these may further develop into the future. Participants will work in international teams that crowd-source around cases. Examples cases are over-tourism in major city destinations, the development of accessible tourism, wilderness based tourism, or the (re-)design of contested heritage. Participants can make use of different social science perspectives to approach these cases in practice.

This course will go live on the 15th of May. We invite a wide diversity of participants (students, city planners, creative entrepreneurs, policy makers, artists) to join us in re-working these cases. Please share with anyone you think can benefit from this online course!

The course can be followed for free when auditing, or for a small fee for learners who like to engage in our international team environment.

For the course about page and enrolment, see:

<https://www.edx.org/course/sustainable-tourism-rethinking-future-tour02x>

Best wishes,

René van der Duim
Wageningen University
The Netherlands