This is where 68% of the world's population will live by 2050

By 2050, 68% of the world's population will live in urban areas, predicts the United Nations. How cities of the future deal with that influx presents a lucrative opportunity for designers and developers, working with urban planners, architects and engineers, to create vibrant communities, says Vivid Ideas and SXSW speaker, and Principal of Hoyne Design, Andrew Hoyne, whose design clients include Mirvac, Dexu and Frasers Property.

LEVERAGING THE ROLE OF THE URBAN PLANNING PROFESSION FOR ONE OF THE CENTRAL POLICY CHALLENGES OF OUR TIMES

Tackling corruption in urban development is a key policy challenge of our time. Activating the professional integrity of the urban planning community is a particularly promising and underexplored response to this challenge, especially in the context of Africa. These are the two key messages that this working paper seeks to advance, referencing some of the most pertinent empirics on urban corruption (section 1), as well as the latest thinking and learning in anti-corruption (section 2). As such, this paper seeks to speak to scholars, practitioners, and activists in both the anti-corruption and urban development fields – two largely disconnected communities that could...Read more

3rd INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON SMART AND SUSTAINABLE PLANNING FOR CITIES AND REGIONS 2019
(9th to 13th December 2019)

SSPCR 2019 offers a place where research can turn into practice and visionary approaches into (planning) policies and tools for local authorities and decision-makers in urban and regional contexts. SSPCR 2019 explores the impact of academic research, the opportunities for scaling-up and replicability of pilot projects, and the added value of local bottom-up initiatives in relation to complex challenges posed by the smart city/region approach.
