

Apologies for cross-posting

The University of Maryland Baltimore County is currently accepting applications for graduate students in the Geography and Environmental Systems Department, a department committed to examining urban inequality issues both in the United States and internationally, with a number of faculty members working in Baltimore and Latin America. <https://ges.umbc.edu/>

My research broadly relates to critical poverty studies, urban geography, international development, children's geographies and children's rights, with a current focus on Peru and Baltimore, MD. I am particularly seeking graduate students with interests in urban inequality and childhood.

Possible topics of interests include, but are not limited to:

- uneven development
- housing and educational inequalities
- discourse and poverty politics
- migration and children's rights,
- care labor,
- the relationship between poverty and environment and
- geographies of motherhood.

Admitted PhD students receive funding in the form of TA-ships (and possible research assistant-ships) for four years. Both Masters and PhD students are also eligible for a new one year Environment and Society Fellowship (<https://ges.umbc.edu/gradfellowship/>).

Applications are due February 1st, so please contact me (Dena Aufseeser) at daufsee@umbc.edu as soon as possible with any questions.
