Women and Land in the Muslim World

The challenges in accessing land faced by women in the Muslim world do not substantially differ from those faced by women in other parts of the world. Various factors, including socially prescribed gender roles, unequal power dynamics at household and community level, discriminatory family practices, unequal access to justice, institutions and land administration processes, traditional norms and local tenure relationships serve as a barrier to women's tenure rights. However, 20 per cent of the world's population is Muslim and certain land-related patterns reflecting customary and religious practices emerge as common elements that create context-specific opportunities to meet these challenges. In this report, Global Land Tool

Network partners investigate these common elements...read more
