

Dear colleagues,

The Dresden Leibniz Graduate School (DLGS) announces doctoral fellowships at the TU Dresden oriented towards making cities and regions more sustainable, resilient and inclusive. Doctoral Candidates will investigate new concepts, instruments and policies to promote social development, economic growth and environmentally sustainable urban and regional development. DLGS is a joint activity of the Leibniz Institute of Ecological Urban and Regional Development (IÖR) and Technische Universität Dresden (TUD); its interdisciplinary composition as well as possible research visits abroad enable graduates to rapidly complete innovative doctorates.

The deadline for application to join the next cohort (2020-2022) is September 15, 2019. Selection interviews for this cohort are planned via Skype for the fourth quarter of 2019. A detailed description of this call, and of the research lines and topics can be found at DLGS website. For further information please contact the DLGS scientific coordinator Dr. Paulina Schiappacasse.

Apologies for cross-posting,

Sincerely,

Alejandro de Castro Mazarro
Leibniz Institute of Ecological Urban and Regional Development
Weberplatz 1, 01217 Dresden, Germany
a.decastro@ioer.de
+49 351 46 79 223