

The Department of History at New Mexico State University invites applications for a one-year appointment as Visiting Assistant Professor in public history. We are particularly interested in candidates with specialists in historic preservation, digital history, and the American West and/or U.S.-Mexico borderlands. Preference will be given to candidates with formal experience developing and overseeing public/digital history projects.

Duties include teaching undergraduate and graduate courses, overseeing student public history projects, and serving on graduate committees. Teaching load is 3 courses per semester, including selections such as HIST202G (US History 1877), HIST 313 (Making of the Modern West), HIST 369 (History of Latinos in US), HIST 386 (New Mexico History), HIST 397 (Intro to Public History); HIST 479 (Oral History), HIST 483 (Historic Preservation), and HIST 486 (Interpreting Historic Places).

Applications must be submitted online at: <http://jobs.nmsu.edu/postings/34964>.
